WM. GREENE CHALLENGES
REV. DUNCAN TO DEBATE

It was reported to the minister of M. E. church of Frankfort that a commotion had been caused during a Sunday School session in which three of the class, all students of Joliet High School claimed that the most brilliant scholars of the present day were men who did not believe that Christianity was the greatest factor in civilization.

"I am very glad that the young men of our church are thinking past the old barriers which have caused stagnation and decay in the spiritual life of our churches in past years," declared Rev. Mr. Duncan, pastor of the Frankfort M. E. church "and it is a pleasure for me to accept the challenge of the Hon. William R. Greene to debate this subject."

People who do not think are like Lot's wife, constantly looking back over past life and finally turning in to a pillar of salt.

Falls From Engine;
Is Seriously Hurt

Vance Taylor, a fireman on the Rock Island met with a serious accident early Tuesday morning when he fell off a moving engine east of Mokena.

Two engines were "deadheading" from Joliet to Blue Island and Mr. Taylor was on one of these engines. He resides on a farm between New Lenox and Mokena and had intended to get off at New Lenox but fell asleep and was carried by. In some unaccountable manner Mr. Taylor fell off the engine a short distance east of Mokena and landed in a ditch and was knocked senseless by the fall and laid helpless in the ditch for several hours. The engineer on an east bound freight saw Mr. Taylor lying in the ditch and stopped his train to pick him up. When members of the train crew reached his side they found him unconscious. Mr. Taylor was taken to the Blue Island hospital. He was brought home Wednesday.

Oak Lawn School
Shows Activity

The pupils of the Oak Lawn public school have selected Eleanore Mullen as a reporter for the News-Bulletin for school news only.

A meeting of the P. T. A. was held in the school auditorium last Friday afternoon. Committees were appointed to secure an open shelf in the library and to renovate the lunch room. The next regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held on January 8th at 3 p. m.

Our school was made very happy thru the kindness and generosity of Mrs. Barkas of Oak Lawn who presented the school with a $25 check which was applied to the stage fund and we are now the proud possessors of green curtains which adds greatly to the beauty of our stage. They were dedicated the night of the achievement program. We thank Mrs. Barkas for this donation.

Mrs. Warren McFarland has very kindly offered to supply the first grade room with enough black oil cloth to allow each child a pocket so they will have a place to put their books, crayons, and pencils. As this is quite a necessity Mrs. McFarland's offer is greatly appreciated by the children and teacher.

Teachers meeting every Monday at 3:30 p. m. Children's chorus every Friday afternoon.

After two months of hard work, we have succeeded in opening the library for our school. We are greatly indebted to Miss Skinner, teacher of Grade 2, for this valuable service. Miss Skinner who has served as librarian in the Chicago Public Library has arranged our library according to Chicago library rules; thus making permanent records for each book and each child.

We have an excellent selection of books for the upper grades, but none for the lower.

Grace Deisbeck, Christina, Mildred Salikar and Edna Wildner are assistant librarians. The library is open every Tuesday from 3:30 to 4:30 p. m.

The universal joy of Christmas is wonderful and it is a happy Christmas that can take us back to childhood days. You are cordially invited to witness such a scene on Dec. 24 at 1 p. m., in our school auditorium. Christmas songs and verses will be sung by the children's chorus.

An unusual happy event occurred in the nature of a surprise luncheon last Monday afternoon in our newly renovated lunch room. Members of the P. T. A., and the teachers spent a pleasant hour over the tea-cups. The teachers and pupils are indeed grateful to the members of the P. T. A., for the delightful change in the lunch room.

Oak Lawn Will Celebrate First
Municipal Xmas

Oak Lawn has its first Christmas tree standing in front of Elmore's Real Estate office. It is decorated with tinsel, cotton and many colored electric lights. It is 22 feet high and is lit up every evening. On Xmas evening Santa Claus will visit Oak Lawn and will give presents to all the children from cradle age up to the grammar school age. Don't forget to bring the kiddies from 4 p. m. to 7 p. m., and then Santa starts on the journey.

The tree and presents are gifts of the Oak Lawn Chamber of Commerce to the town and children. Some of the presents are already in the window of Elmore's Real Estate office. Thru the kindness of Frank Platt and George Schulman it was made possible for the tree to be lighted. Mr. Tietzenberg furnished the Christmas tree and Mayor John T. Emery and James F. Curtis managed the rest.

Oak Lawn is lucky to have such an organization as the Chamber of Commerce which has certainly put Oak Lawn on the map.

Oh You Kids of Mokena Read This!

A letter was received by the Mokena Volunteer Fire Department from Santa Claus saying he has arranged to visit the children of Mokena and vicinity Monday evening, at 7 o'clock and will be in Mokena until 8 o'clock. Santa Claus wants to meet all the children under ten years of age and hand them a little present and take their orders for Christmas presents.

Santa Claus will be at Cooper's garage, Mokena from 7 to 8 p. m. Monday evening, December 21st.

ALL CHILDREN INVITED
The idea has gained foothold that a municipal Christmas tree would be the thing for Mokena like it has been started in Oak Lawn this year. Perhaps things will so shape themselves that a municipal Christmas tree and a more elaborate Christmas will be put on next Christmas.

Now we are going to let you in on a big sensation. Herman Schweser, manager of the local Bowman Dairy Plant and Richard Hensel, local druggist are mixed up in a law suit and their case will come up for a hearing before Judge John F. Schultz at the Cooper garage after Santa Claus leaves the garage Monday night. This is going to be a wow of a case and everybody is invited to witness this trial.

Mokena Parents Reminded of Their School Days

The Parents of Mokena had the recollections of their childhood days vividly brought back to them last Thursday, when they attended Mokena Public school as the guests of the pupils and teachers. Special arrangements had been made to hold school afternoon and evening, to enable the parents to visit during regular school hours.

Mokena parents showed much interest, by a large number turning out and showing their willingness to the Teachers and Directors, to back them up in promoting the best educational means for our children.

After school was dismissed at 9 o'clock, the parents, teachers and directors, gathered in the High School room in regular session of the Parents-Teachers Association.

The most important business transacted, was the changing, by unanimous vote, the date of meeting from the 2nd Thursday in the month, to the 2nd Tuesday in the month. It is hoped that all parents will back this movement up by regular attendance, as it will mean much to the progress of our town and school.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for December 20

CHRISTMAS LESSON

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 2:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—"For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."—Luke 2:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Wise Men Visit the Baby Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Wise Men Follow the Star.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Christmas Spirit.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Prince of Peace.

Note: For this Sunday's lesson the lesson committee has given us an option of a Christmas lesson or a summary of Paul's life. It is presumed that most teachers will prefer the Christmas lesson since Paul has been the central figure for six months.

I. The Wise Men Seeking Jesus (vv. 1-2).

These wise men who sought Jesus were either Arabian or Persian astrologers, students of the stars. The appearance of an unusual star attracted their attention. Perhaps they were acquainted with the famous prophecy of Balaam (Num. 24:17). Doubtless through the influence of the Jews who remained in Chaldea, or the direct influence of Daniel extending to this time, they had become acquainted with the hope of a Messiah. The light they had was dim, but they lived up to the best they had. We learn from them:

1. That All True Wisdom Leads to the Savior, for He is the Fullness of Wisdom.

2. That God's Word Shall Not Return Unto Him Void (Isa. 55:11).

The seed cast upon the Eastern waters brought forth fruit after many days. This ought to bring confidence to many ministers and Sunday school teachers who have not as yet seen the fruit of their labors.

3. The Grace of God Calls Men From Unexpected Quarters.

Some who have the least opportunities give the greatest honor to Christ, while others, blessed with the richest opportunities, shut Him out.

II. Herod Seeking to Kill Jesus (vv. 3-8).

The news brought by the wise men struck terror to Herod's heart. He was not alone in this for all Jerusalem was troubled with him. A glimpse at the social customs in and about Jerusalem in that day will enable us to understand why this news brought uneasiness to the people. They were living in the greatest luxury. Beautiful apparel, sumptuous feasts, palatial houses, etc., led to gross immorality. We can thus readily see why Herod and all Jerusalem should be troubled. They did not want a Savior who would save them from their sins; they wanted to continue in them. Herod demanded of the priests and scribes information as to where Christ should be born. They were soon able to tell him. These people had a technical knowledge of the Scriptures, but had no heart for the Savior as set forth therein. Conditions much like these prevail today. This reception of the Savior shows that perverseness of heart is the cause of so many being indifferent to Christ, and of their opposition to Him when His claims are presented. It is true today that the luxuries of wealth, the frivolities of the fashion-lovers, and the gross immoralities to which these lead, make Jesus Christ unwelcome in many quarters.

III. Jesus Found (vv. 9-12).

The wise men, having obtained the desired information, started immediately to find Jesus. As soon as they left the city the star which had guided them from the East appeared again to lead them on—not that it had disappeared from the sky, but no doubt the city buildings shut out its light. The star guided them to the place where Jesus was. When they found Him they worshiped Him. In this they displayed true faith. They did not see any miracle, only a babe, yet they worshiped Him as king. Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed (John 20:29). Note God's overruling providence in all this. Many hundred years before the prophet had said that Christ should come from Bethlehem (Micah. 5:2). God so ordered affairs that Mary should be brought to that city to give birth to Christ. Let us be assured that nothing can thwart the divine purpose. God so ordered that these men should depart another way, thereby defeating Herod's wicked purpose. Through these wise men the Lord gave gifts into the hands of Joseph and Mary before their going to Egypt. Doubtless this served a good purpose in meeting their expenses during their stay there. Truly all things work together for good to them that love God (Rom. 8:28).

Outstanding Fact in Christianity

By REV. JOHN C. PAGE
Teacher of Bible Doctrine, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—God sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him. . . . He loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins. . . . The Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world.—I John 4:9-10, 14.

The common thought that binds these Scriptures together is found in the statement that "God sent His Son to be the Savior of the world." This is the outstanding fact in Christianity. The cause for sending the Son and the purpose in sending Him are both mentioned and must later engage our thought, but the first great need is the renewing of our minds in the clear, plain declaration of fact that "God sent His Son into the world." "For us and our salvation, He came down from heaven."

The importance of an anniversary depends largely upon the greatness of the event which it commemorates. The greatest event in the history of heaven and earth is the coming of Christ into the world. It can never be too strongly stated or too tenaciously held that our Lord came down from heaven and not up from humanity. The Father sent the Son—that is, He sent Him from heaven and sent Him to earth. Just as really as the patriarch Jacob sent Joseph, the son of his love, out of the vale of Hebron, to see if it be "well with the brethren" so did the Heavenly Father send Jesus with a clear purpose in view.

The purpose of the Father is clearly stated as being threefold. First, He sent His Son "to be the propitiation for our sins"; second, "that we might live through Him"; third, He sent the Son "to be the Savior of the world." Consider this threefold purpose of the Father in sending His Son into the world. First He sent Him "to be the propitiation for our sins." What this means may be understood in the light of Christ's own teaching. Referring to His mission, Jesus said, "The Son of Man is come to give His life a ransom for many." Mark that word "ransom" and think of its implications. It indicates a price paid for our redemption. Again, when speaking of His death, He referred to His shed blood as "the blood of the new covenant" shed for the remission of sin. Take these two words "ransom" and "remission" and you will find in them a satisfactory explanation of the purpose of God in sending His Son "to be the propitiation for our sins." At the cross He met every requirement of divine righteousness and discharged every obligation incurred in human sin. "God loved us and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins."

The second part of this threefold purpose is seen in the words "God sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him." "I am come," said Jesus, "that ye might have life." Not only the problem of sin but the problem of death also is met and settled in this threefold purpose of God in sending His Son. To live through Him means to partake of His resurrection life. As a branch partakes of the life of the vine so we being spiritually united to Christ through faith share in His life victory over sin and death. To use the words of II Peter 1:4, we are made "partakers of the divine nature" or to use the words of John 5:24, "We have passed out of death into life." It is a message of life, a new life brought from heaven and bestowed upon those who have faith to receive it. This is the meaning of John 3:16. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." Truly "God sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him." By nature we are dead in trespasses and sins but God quickens us into newness of life through faith in His Son.

The remaining part of God's threefold purpose in sending His Son appears in the words, "The Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world." His sacrifice is sufficient for all. His life is offered to all. "Who-soever will, let him take of the water of life freely." There is enough and to spare. But many turn away or neglect the great salvation. Some love darkness rather than light. Others because of the perversity of their own hearts will not come. "But to as many as receive Him to them He gives saving power," power over sin and death. Let the angels sing; let the saints rejoice; let sinners come.

Beecher and Suffering

Suffering is as God's letter. Open it and read it. Many of you will find that you are titled or that there is an inheritance laid up for you. O my soul, sit thou down as a disciple of Christ, and say, O Lord, what wilt Thou? What shall it do to me? What secret is now to be disclosed? What better way is to be walked? What new strength is to be developed? What higher hope is to be awakened? What disinterested love is to be called into action? What has this suffering brought to me?—Henry Ward Beecher.

Remember Robin Hood Stories

Don and mother went with grandfather to a neighboring town, where grandfather was to preach. After the services a stranger kindly invited them to dine with her at the inn. They accepted, and were just finishing dinner when the hostess turned to Don and asked if he had had all he wanted.

"No," was the prompt reply. And when questioned further, announced he wished a pot of ale.

His amazed mother asked what he meant, well knowing the child did not know what ale meant.

"Isn't this an inn?" asked the child.

And when mother said it was, he replied, "When Robin Hood's men went to an inn they always asked for a pot of ale."

"Penny" Nails

It should really be "pounds," not "penny," when you ask for a six-penny or an eight-penny nail. Years ago it used to be that a thousand nails of a certain size weighed six pounds, of another a bit larger the same number weighed eight pounds—hence eight-pound nails, six-pound nails, which, hurriedly spoken, soon became contracted to six-penny, eight-penny.

ORLAND M. E. CHURCH NOTES

Elmer L. Setterlund, pastor
Our moving picture program for the Christmas holidays is an extraordinary one. Observe, first of all, that there will be no moving picture entertainment on Friday night of Christmas week—but the famous film "The Ten Commandments" is scheduled for two performances on Saturday, December 26th. The first show will be at 5:30 p. m. and the second at 7:45. This is probably the greatest picture produced by the moving picture industry and comes from the Paramount studios.

Sunday morning, December 27th Bible school at 9:30. Last Sunday our attendance climbed to 100. We want to make it 150 soon. Will you help and be helped by joining us if you are not already enrolled in some Bible school?

Morning worship at 10:30. This will be a Christmas service with a special Christmas sermon and also Christmas music, by the choir. Do not miss it.

In the evening there is the attraction of Christmas music by the choir and also a four reel Christmas film—entitled "Old Serpoge." The famous Christmas story by Dickens, which has been dramatized. Do not miss this Christmas attraction.

Note this Very Special Christmas announcement. The regular Christmas program given by our Sunday school will take place Christmas Eve at the church at 7:45 o'clock. This program is a program of recitations, songs, etc., and includes the coming of Santa Claus. Do not miss it. Thursday evening, December 24th.

At the Sunday evening service on December 13th the speaker of the evening was Mr. T. C. Fan, a nephew of the Minister of the Education for the Republic of China. Mr. Fan showed interesting articles from his country, spoke of various "modern" aspects of China and gave the audience a real understanding of China's awakening. Many expressed their hope that Mr. Fan will return to Orland.

A new moving picture schedule for Sunday evening services for the first three months in January has been prepared and will soon be published. See later announcements.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hewson, Jr., have gone to Florida for a stay of two weeks in company with his wife's mother, Mrs. Dewinger of Elgin, who will spend the winter with her daughter.

On Wednesday, December 23, will occur the annual Xmas programs of the Mokena Public Schools. The Primary and Intermediate Rooms under the direction of Miss Norton and Mrs. Ferguson will unite for their program and the Junior and High School rooms will unite for their program. These programs will be held immediately after school has convened in the afternoon and the school will be dismissed after the termination of same for the Xmas holiday recess. School opens again January 4, on Monday. Both rooms will have a Xmas tree and it is hoped that Santa can be persuaded to remain here long enough for the distribution of gifts from both trees. All of the parents and others interested are invited to come and enjoy the holiday spirit with us. Yours for a Merry Xmas and A Happy New Year.

Its Advantage

They were discussing the advantages of the various college courses.
"So you've decided on an art course instead of a scientific course?" Inquired the girl. "Oh, yes," answered the youth, "it seemed the better course for me." Her next question was,
"Why?" and his reply to that was,
"Well, everybody says it's easier to

SINNERS in HEAVEN

Croft deemed it expedient to wait for Babooma to attack. To attempt a return with these tired men risked meeting the enemy in the interstices of the forest, where open fighting would be impossible. Given at last the excuse, he determined to take no avoidable chances in attempting the extermination of the growing menace to the prosperity of the tribe. He therefore inspected their weapons, arming those who had forgotten sword, spear or arrow; afterward, with Roowa as adjutant, he posted part of his little army round the tent, and issued directions. A few men were sent in search of fresh fruits along the north of the forest. Alan busying himself with the remainder in strengthening the hut and palisade. With the revolver, loaded with its one remaining bullet, in her belt, Barbara found her time fully occupied with the problem of preparing sufficient food for these uninvited guests. Suddenly she started from her peaceful employment, and her cheeks blanched. A shrill cry of fear had sounded beyond the garden. . . . Another arose, yet another. . . . She hurried out of the hut, meeting Alan running from the landward end of the palisade, where he had been working. Outside the seaward entrance, a group of natives clustered together, chattering excitedly, staring at some far point in the sky. At sight of Croft, their agitation increased.

"A-aa! a-aa! Great Chief, behold!" they cried, pointing upward. "See! A great bird approacheth. Harken to the sound of his wings, the cry of his wrath! A-aa! A bird of ill omen, O Mighty Chief!" They began to wail and moan, striking their breasts. Others joined them, taking up the cry: "A bird of ill omen! A-aa! a-aa! A bird of ill omen, O Mighty Chief!" He shaded his eyes with his hands, searching the dazzling blue.

Suddenly his arms fell to his sides, and he turned to the girl. "By G—d! It's an airplane! Coming this way, too!"

He called to Roowa. "Go, Roowa! run! Take me to the beacon upon the hill! Make it blaze fast and high! Go—swift as the lightning flash!"

Far off, the noise of her engines but faintly audible, the unmistakable outline of an airplane showed at a great height, flying toward the island from the north.

The natives, forgetting all instructions, clustered together, full of superstitious terror. The women and children left the garden and huddled near their men, a few moaning, the rest silent from fear of this new unknown.

Alan's fingers gripped Barbara's arm, and they ran down to the shore. With faces pale and tense, they stood there motionless, their hearts racing chaotically, their eyes fixed upon the speck growing ever larger, looming nearer and nearer. . . . The distant drone of the engines became louder. . . . From the hilltop a column of smoke rose into the clear air; soon a leaping flame mingled with it. . . . another shot up higher. . . . As the machine whirled, loudly and swiftly, to within a few hundred yards, still flying high, the pile of sticks and leaves, branches and undergrowth—quickly dried in the afternoon sun—burned, and roared, and leaped, the red tongues of fire and billowing smoke showing clear against the blue of sea and sky.

"Will they see it?" muttered Alan. He waved wildly; but the airplane flew serenely on, skirting the island, toward the west.

"D—n them!" he ejaculated. "They must see that fire!"

Barbara held her breath, every nerve taut. But as the strain seemed to reach breaking point, the machine slackened speed. With sudden cessation of noise, her engines were shut off, and she came swiftly down in large circles until low over the water; then she turned and flew slowly back outside the barrier reef. Turning again, she rose a little, flying up toward the beacon—then round again, and back to the reef.

Alan could recognize her now for a seaplane. Seeing two figures upon her, once more he waved, shouting vociferously. . . . With a graceful swoop down, again she turned, sinking lower and lower; until at last she rested upon the calm waters of the lagoon, and came skimming lightly toward the shore. . . .

A silence of horror had fallen upon the natives. Some dropped on their knees or flung themselves on their faces, not daring to look seaward; others stood still as death, their glittering eyes never wavering from the figure of their white chief, their hands grasping their weapons—ready at a word to dash forward, with their blood-curdling yells, to his aid. . . . Then one or two rubbed their eyes, as if unable to see aright. . . . The white chief was wading out, unarmed, into the rippling wavelets, to meet the awful bird of ill omen. . . . They looked fearfully at one another! They held their breath. . . . He had returned to land. . . . Two queer figures enveloped in much clothing, with fearsome goggle eyes protruding from their heads, were descending from between the vast wings. . . . The white chief and his wife were talking, laughing, wringing their hands again and again. . . . But lo! the huge eyes fell from those faces. . . . The natives lifted up their voices in a howl of fear. . . .

Down by the water, a babel of English and French voices, torrents of questions pouring forth in both languages, the replies unheeded in the mutual relief, surprise and excitement! The two Frenchmen mixed both tongues indiscriminately, shaking the Englishman's hands again and again, kissing those of the girl in their demonstrative exuberance.

They had, it transpired, been swept from their bearings in a thunder storm, having accepted a bet to fly from America to Honolulu, thence to Australia, in their small seaplane. While endeavoring to recapture their route between the two latter places, faced with engine trouble, they had perceived the beacon flaring below. . . . They introduced themselves—Philippe and Louis de Borceau, thirsting for adventure to enliven the monotony of post-war existence.

Advancing a few steps Croft addressed the bewildered natives in words whose utter unintelligibility caused the two strangers to gaze at him, then at the girl, an uneasy suspicion rising in their minds that the Englishman's brain had softened. However, a relief was obvious among the group of blacks, and a murmur of voices broke forth. . . .

Croft returned, and further explanations were given. Bit by bit the excited Frenchmen grasped the main facts of this extraordinary situation. "Vot're nom?" cried the elder. "En route to l'Australie, you tell us? But I remember—dites-moi—quick—your name, M'sieu?"

Upon hearing it, the little Frenchman danced. "Ciel! I remember!" cried Louis. "All de world was interested! It was thought you all perish. But you and—"

He paused. He glanced at Barbara, at the hand which, instinctively, she had clasped round Alan's arm. . . .

And in that pause, something cold and clammy seemed to clutch the girl's heart, causing her to grip closer the arm she held.

Alan put his hand over hers. "My wife," he said very clearly. "The world had thrown a shadow across the perfect blue."

Proud of their home, they led their guests thither for food, when the seaplane had been safely beached. There during the meal, they explained the native trouble. The idea of fighting anything or anybody thrilled both these adventurous young men.

"Vat guns have you?" they asked. "vat ammunitions?"

When informed of the lack of firearms, and shown the bows, arrows, spears and crossed wooden swords, they sat and gaped. The weapons, no less than the hut, with its many ingenious devices for use and comfort, aroused their keenest interest.

"Eh! But it is a leetle paradise!" cried Philippe. "Vat you call 'cosay'! All ze chairs! And a table! And ze flowers!" He turned to Barbara, when Alan went out to restore order among the natives. "You have turned ze wilderness into home, Madame! It is dat you vill not like to leave it! Oui?"

She looked around the familiar room she loved so well, out through the doorway to the black figures in the garden, which had been such a pride—and again she felt her heart contract.

The shadowy outside world had once more become a tangible reality.

The engine trouble proved more serious than any idea of a dash to civilization for succor was abandoned. Until the sun had set and the moon risen, the three men worked upon it. Croft, with the delight of a child over the return of some long-lost toy. When a short trial trip was made, he took the pilot's seat.

Another sharp spasm of pain shot through Barbara's heart, as she looked round upon the faces she knew so well. Much as rescue would mean to them both, the thought of renouncing their free life here filled her with grief. The prospect of bowing again to all the little rules making a maze of civilization chilled her. The analogy presented itself to her mind of being slowly caught up into some huge net spreading over the universe, beyond which lay this little wilderness where she had dwelt and learned to love.

Croft's instinct was to send her away to immediate safety; but that proved impossible. He conferred lengthily with the two brothers, under cover of their work together. Afterward, leaving Louis to finish, he and Philippe went indoors to pore over charts, discuss routes and conclude arrangements. When, later, the two aviators, dead tired after their adventures, were rolled in their huge coats upon the floor, he drew Barbara into their bedroom and unfolded the plans.

Should Babooma attack in the night, the Frenchmen, however zealous, would obviously fail to distinguish friends from foe. Their responsibility, therefore, would be the safeguarding of the women and children in the hut—Barbara's welfare being their special consideration.

"Should things go badly, and Babooma manage to do me in," he continued hurriedly, "trust yourself entirely to them: they know what to do and where to go. If, after all, he doesn't attack, but waits for us to move, Philippe de Borceau will take you away at daybreak and send help. His brother will stay with me."

She demurred hotly to this, unwilling to leave him in danger, protesting against being compelled to desert her post among the frightened women. The argument waxed long and heated between them. But, when Croft's mind was finally and irrevocably made up, anger and tears proved unavailing. Only by reminding her of the debt owed to another; by prevailing upon all her rising motherhood, did he at last break down her resistance.

"But my mental agonies will be worse than physical ones!" she assured him, rebelliously. "I hope Babooma attacks tonight. Then we can face him together, and know the result."

The two Frenchmen being utterly worn out, he forbore to suggest their going at once by moonlight; over which forced delay she secretly exulted.

The stillness around was intense. Now and then it was broken by the cry of a child, quickly hushed again. Within the palisade, the black forms of the men lay close to the ground, with here and there a pair of eyes watching, sentinels, between the stakes. With the two Frenchmen to protect the girl from treachery, Croft felt pretty confident over the result of any night attack. Well aware of the black chief's desires for her, he had warned De Borceau of this danger.

He bowed over, don't wait—don't risk it!"

He bowed over, don't wait—don't risk it!"

A tiny choked exclamation escaped her lips. He looked quickly round. Swiftly, with a sudden passionate movement, he seized her in his arms, straining her fiercely to him; then, as swiftly, he released her, and she found herself alone.

The battle waged long and furious. For a time the men hidden on the hillside, after surprising the little army wriggling down the bay, kept it fiercely engaged, away from the hut. But gradually, to the girl's strained ears, the wild struggle seemed to draw nearer. . . . Presently, as she could tell by the excited yells close by, those men guarding the hut itself were attacked. . . .

The fighting blood of the Frenchmen tingled within them; they fingered their extraordinary, clumsy weapons, impatient to hurl themselves out into the fray—yet instinctively submitting to their orders, realizing the wisdom of the leader who had appointed each man his task with supreme insight into detail. . . .

Soon the uproar raged round the palisade. Every now and then, a crashing, ripping sound was heard, proving portions to have been burst through and trampled down. The scuffling feet, snorting breath, muttered cries, blood-curdling shouts and yells, were close. . . . Penetrating the bamboo walls came venomous spear-points and sharp arrow-heads, sometimes piercing the shoulders of those standing near. . . . The women grew demented. . . . Barbara tried, unsuccessfully, to keep as many as possible in the central hut, where only the two end walls were exposed to the weapons; these points the Frenchmen guarded, ready for any onslaught. . . .

Simultaneously, with dramatic suddenness, three things happened to end the terrible period of waiting.

With a startling crash, the outer wall of the sleeping hut gave way, and in surged a fighting medley of black figures. . . . From the other side, or kitchen, a cloud of smoke and crackling flame arose. . . . The hut was on fire!

All power of restraining the women was past. As the Frenchmen dashed forward to meet the intruders on one side, and the black smoke belled in from the other, they turned with one accord, struggled madly in their stampede for the main entrance, then streamed out—wild with terror—into the cold gray of the early dawn. . . .

At the same time, from without, amid the general hubbub, one loud wailing cry arose, in a mixture of native and broken English tongues—a frightened, agonized cry: "The white chief; A-aa! a-aa! The white chief! . . . The white chief! . . . A-aa! a-aa! a-aa!"

It reached the ashen-faced girl within. . . . and of that alone was she conscious. The roaring flames and blinding smoke, the struggling black men and shouting stream of women, faded from her eyes. Her work was finished here, and she never hesitated. Without a backward glance, she drew the revolver from her belt and dashed outside. . . .

As she ran, gasping, up the slope, she paid no heed to her own danger—was unaware of both black and white men from the hut following in hot pursuit. . . . Again the dense medley parted before her eyes. At the same instant a spear sped through the air. Whizzing angrily past her, straight at two struggling forms, it flew with unerring judgment and buried its hideous point in the white man's back. He reeled, loosed his antagonist, threw groping arms wide. With a demoniacal cry of triumph, Babooma made a spring. . . .

As twice before, a sharp report reverberated, and the seething mass was momentarily obscured by smoke. . . . A pair of black hands grasped the girl's arms as she tottered backward, dropping her smoking weapon. For a brief instant she recognized Roowa's face, which seemed to merge into that of De Borceau; then her senses slipped from her, and everything faded into oblivion. . . .

Not knowing friend from foe, the struggle for her unconscious body was sharp and furious. But the two Frenchmen were fresh and uninjured; and Roowa's supporters had rushed on, in wild distress, to that other seething heap. . . . Just one glimpse of two prostrate forms being hoisted, amid a frenzy of fighting, wails and shouts—and the two white men devoted themselves to their oath. . . .

On trembling knees at last, bleeding, helpless, his cries drowned by the noise around and the roaring flames from the hut, Roowa watched the strangers seize the inert form of his white chief's wife, and disappear toward the coast. . . .

The thick fighting mass had dissolved into odd struggling groups of twos and threes; the prostrate forms had disappeared. Away near the palm grove could be seen a quickly vanishing crowd of dark figures. . . . The flames belched forth from the burning hut, overcoming the early daylight. . . .

Presently the steady monotonous drone of retreating engines blended with the rising wind of the dawn. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

HOW TO KEEP WELL

A HUMAN INTEREST STORY

EVERY newspaper man knows what a human interest story is. Newspapers exist to print the news. It isn't a newspaper's business to supply its readers with lectures on morality or religion or ethics. Neither is it a newspaper's business to appeal to its readers' emotions. News, plain, cold news, is what the reporters and editors try to prepare for the pages of their paper.

But every once in a while something happens that is news and that also has a touch of the common, elemental impulses of humanity. A child lost in a crowded street; a man found dead, with nothing in his pockets but a woman's picture; a little girl struck down by an automobile, her stiffening fingers still clutching a rag doll; a woman, old and worn with her mind hopelessly gone, who thinks that she is still young and beautiful. These are all human interest stories.

These Keeping Well stories which go into newspapers all over the country must necessarily be impersonal. Although they tell of man's age-long struggle with disease and death, his eternal foes, and deal with questions which closely touch the every-day lives of all of us, they are general rather than individual. Naturally, many letters come to me from readers, some criticizing, some asking for further information. And then the other day came the human interest story.

From a small town in a Central state came a letter. The writer, a hard working woman past middle life, enclosed a clipping from her town weekly, one of the papers which has been running the Keeping Well stories in a health column. She said she had been reading these articles with great interest and that one, she thought, was written specially for her. It was the one about Doctor Joslin's experience with insulin in treating diabetic children.

She has had diabetes for ten years. She has been able to keep working until a few months ago. She is now too ill to work. She has only $15 a month to live on. Until she read my story, she had never heard of insulin and did not know that there was any help for diabetes. How and where could she get this wonderful remedy and get well enough so she could go back to work.

The town in which she lived was a small one, 500 miles away. I knew no one there. But nine miles away was a larger city in which was a modern hospital, the medical head of which was a professional friend, of high standing. I wrote him, enclosing the letter and simply saying, "I don't need to tell you what to do. Here's a woman who needs help." This morning came a reply saying, "I have arranged to have her admitted to the hospital and given treatment until she is well."

And I'll bet that when the editor of that paper knows about it, as I intend he shall, he'll think that the health column in his paper has paid big dividends.

MILK FOR MEDICINE

ONE of the largest mail order houses in the country has about 9,000 employees. Thousands of orders are handled every day. Every person in that huge machine has to work at high speed from 8:15 in the morning until five at night.

One year, just before the holidays, when work was at its highest point, the superintendent was puzzled at the number of cases in the different departments of the girls fainting at their desks. What was the cause of it nobody knew but they did know that it was demoralizing the plant.

The perplexed superintendent called in the medical director, Doctor Welland. What was the cause of all this? Doctor Welland didn't know but he said he'd try and find out.

The first thing he did was to call for a report from each department head as to the number of girls who had fainted and all the circumstances. When he got them all together he studied them carefully. Then he made a curious discovery. Most of the girls who fainted, fainted between ten and twelve in the morning and three and five in the afternoon. Seemed almost as though they fainted by schedule. Funny, but these were the facts.

Then Doctor Welland began to think hard. Studies of large numbers of workers by many observers showed that a worker in any line will start in at eight and work better and better up to ten. Then his energy begins to run down and goes down until lunch time. The rest and food refresh him and up goes his energy curve from one to three. Then it sags slowly until closing time.

Inquiry showed that many of the girls in order to get to work on time, ate hasty and sometimes meager breakfasts. If a girl had been out to a party or a dance the night before and had overslept, this was especially apt to occur. By ten, she was "all in"; by 10:30 or 11, she had gotten in to the limit of her strength and topped over.

What did Doctor Welland do? Simplest thing you know. Ordered every girl in the plant served with a large glass of milk at ten and at three. The fainting stopped.

Christmas Parcel for Miss Melinda

Package Did Not Contain Expected Ring, but She Became Engaged.

By MARION R. REAGAN

MELINDA BROWN, spinster, had been waiting all year for Peter Moffat to propose. In fact, ever since they had met some two years before, she had felt that Peter could be brought around to take the "big plunge" with her into the sea of matrimony, but things had not gone on so well as she could have hoped. She was sure Peter loved her, but he was an extremely shy man and it required no little pushing to get him up to the point. Several times Melinda thought she "had" him. She had given him every opening by referring coyly to her "own little home—if she ever had one," and to her "lonely life at present," but Peter only sat silent at such remarks, ignoring them completely, or stupidly telling her that after all, many people led more lonely lives than she, and not to be so discontented.

Melinda looked forward to the approaching Christmas season with glee. Surely he would give her a ring for Christmas, after these months of courting. The season advanced and Christmas arrived bringing a parcel from Mr. Moffat and a note sent from Chicago. Melinda's heart sank when she saw the postmark. "Out of town for Christmas. Then it is all off," she said sadly. She glanced at the package—ten inches square—surely no engagement ring in that. Slowly she untied it. It was writing paper. She opened the letter from him and read: "Just a Christmas greeting, hoping you will write to me frequently. I shall be in Chicago for several months. Sincerely, 'PETER MOFFAT.'"

Furious, Melinda tore the note into bits. "I shall never look at him again," she breathed. "And after the way I've run after him! But that's been the trouble. I've run after him too much. I shall never write to him. From this out I shall never speak to him again—never speak to him again!" she repeated emphatically. And Melinda kept her word.

Peter Moffat was growing a little uneasy. Three months had passed and no word from Melinda. It finally became too much even for the patient Mr. Moffat. He felt his temper rising steadily against Melinda. "Thinks she can play a game like that, eh? Run after me while I'm in town and then drop me when I go away. Probably after some other man now." This thought brought crimson flashes of jealousy to the already highly colored cheeks of Peter Moffat. "By George, no woman will make a fool out of me!" he exploded. "I'll go to Springfield tonight and I'll make her marry me. After all these months of courting her, too!"

It so happened that Melinda's cousin

"Merry Christmas, Happy New Year!"

LITTLE cullud Rastus come a-skippin' down the street, A-smilin' an' a-grinnin' at every one he meets. My, oh! he was happy! Boy! but he was gay! Wishin' "Merry Christmas" an' "Happy New Year's Day!" Wishin' that his wishes might every one come true— And—bless your dear heart, honey—I wish the same to you!

In Arthur, who had come from Kansas City was having dinner with her at the hotel the night Peter Moffat came in from Chicago. Peter was hurrying down the street from the station when he happened to look in at the brightly lighted restaurant of the hotel and there—what? He stopped dead still, the evil green monster rising in his breast. It was Melinda with another man! His first impulse was to rush into the hotel, punch this impertinent stranger and carry Melinda off with him. But this shyness was stronger than his passion and he only turned away, grinding his teeth and clenching his fists. He would see Melinda in the morning at her house!

The next morning about nine o'clock Melinda was surprised to see Peter Moffat at her door. She began to tremble nervously. "Good morning, Peter," she said to him, and extended a cold, moist hand. Peter grunted.

"I've come to talk to you, Melinda," he said very seriously indeed, and closed the door behind him. They sat in the little parlor of the Brown house. "You haven't been playing a straight game with me, Melinda," he began. "I know all about it—you needn't try to explain. I saw you last night, and I've seen you other nights. You have only been using me as a plaything while you've had these other fellows on the side."

Melinda gasped. "Why Peter Moffat, you—you!" she could think of nothing to say.

"I know all about it," he repeated; "I've been watching you. Now all I've got to say is that I'm not a man to be trifled with. Either you marry me at once or you never will see me again. I want an answer right now, yes or no."

Melinda felt as though she had been suddenly hurled into an avalanche. She could not understand what had gotten into Peter, or what he was referring to. She did know, however, with an ecstatic sense of delight that he was proposing.

"I'll marry you whenever you say, Peter," she said meekly.

Peter, feeling greatly triumphant, leaned over and kissed his future wife tenderly. "We'll be married tomorrow," he said.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Why have RHEUMATISM?

O H, what a wonderful feeling to be free from that miserable rheumatism. To know again the joy of limber joints and active muscles—freedom from that agonizing pain!

How often have you longed for some relief as you suffered torture from swollen, inflamed muscles and joints—how often have you said you would give anything in the World for a few hours comfort!

But you didn't know that all you had to do to get real relief from this nerve wracking misery was just to build rich, red blood, did you? You didn't know that rheumatism had to be stopped from the inside by destroying the impurities that cause it—by building millions of red cells in your poor, weak blood, did you?

Until you fill your system full of healthy, rich, red blood you will never end your rheumatism. S. S. S. will surely help you. That's because S.S.S. helps Nature build the red-blood-cells that fight off the impurities that cause rheumatism.

Conquer rheumatism! S. S. S. has shown the way. For generations S. S. S. has brought blessed relief and comfort to thousands of rheumatic sufferers.

When the rich, red blood that S. S. S. helps Nature build goes coursing through your system, it purifies the blood in your body. Rheumatism vanishes—skin blemishes disappear—you begin to get hungry again and enjoy your food—strength and power fill your body—you are vigorous—red-blooded and ready for action. Know this joy of living again! Take S. S. S. and banish rheumatism!

Get S. S. S. from any druggist. The larger bottle is more economical.
